

Invest your time in reading & learning about money!

The Vermont State Treasurer's Office is pleased to bring you Reading is an Investment, a program for elementary-age children that promotes literacy and aims to teach Vermont youth about money and basic financial concepts. The program requires students to complete a free reading requirement and read three books from this list. Students track their progress through a reading log they can get online at www.MoneyEd.Vermont.gov or from their library. Students must have an adult sign the log before mailing it to the State Treasurer's Office. All completed student logs are entered into a drawing. Students may win one of twenty $250 college savings plan accounts. If there's a book on this list that your school library does not have, be sure to check with your public library. Many libraries will allow you to request a title through interlibrary loan. This list contains more than 70 titles of books that explore themes related to money. Happy reading!

Eligibility Requirements

- Participants must be elementary-age in Kindergarten through Grade 6, reside in Vermont, and must meet the program's reading requirements and deadline.
- Children who are eligible for the college savings plan account drawing may win only one prize per year. All prizes will be in the form of a $250 Vermont Higher Education Investment Plan account--Vermont's official 529 college savings plan.
- Participants are responsible for any costs they incur in fulfilling the requirements of this program.

A Message for Parents, Teachers & Librarians

The books on this list teach personal financial skills using a variety of direct and indirect approaches. While one book may directly illustrate how a child saves for an important purchase, another book may indirectly show the financial and personal benefits that result from building and following a budget. You play a key role in helping children make the connection between these stories and their individual lives. At the preschool level, children can be taught that money is a medium of exchange, the basic names and the value of simple currency, and how to save for small purchases. At the elementary school level, children can be taught how money is earned, how to make good choices with their money, and how basic financial tools like ATM cards, credit cards, and checking and savings accounts work. You can use these books to start conversations about these concepts. The stories can give you an opportunity to compare the experience of a character in one of these books to something similar that your family has experienced.
